1. [redacted] relations between Albanian border guards and personnel of Polish ships were very strained. Often, the two groups engaged each other in barroom brawls. There was also friction between the Albanian border guards and Rumanian seamen but this was usually confined to verbal antagonism. To avoid incidents between Rumanian seamen and Albanian border guards, the seamen were requested not to have any contact with the Albanian unit.
2. [redacted] when [redacted] docked at Klaipeda (N 55-42, E 21-10), Lithuanian SSR, [redacted] officer attempted to make the customers in a bar listen to Communist propaganda. He became involved in a fight with the customers and returned to the [redacted] with a black eye. He was then reprimanded by the Political Officer and flown back to Rumania where he lost his Seamen's Book as punishment. The population of Klaipeda did not approve of the Soviet regime and [redacted] heard of incidents where the Lithuanians in the town fought the Soviet seamen. Rumanian seamen were cautioned not to stay in the town late at night.
